

AXEL CRIEGER

CLASSIC

AXEL CRIEGER (b. 1955) was born in Munich, Germany. He studied visual communication and worked as a photographer, director and designer for international clients such as Time Warner, BMW, Heineken and Daimler AG (Ford Motor Company) in New York, Los Angeles, Paris, London and Milan.

Crieger mixes various techniques such as drawing, photography, collage, post-production to assemble his work based on existing photographs of historical figures, movie characters and luxury products, recreating narratives. The result is oneiric and mysterious scenarios that give a sensation of unreality and immediately capture the interest and curiosity of the spectator.

Axel Crieger brings together a range of elements and ideas to create unique theatrical images, each with its own unique nuances of decadence, danger or desire.

Crieger's work is at once thought-provoking and fun with its unexpected juxtapositions, creating a curious and compelling narrative – what Entertainment Weekly (New York) described as "the grammar of glamour". His latest collection is inspired by some of the luxury brands he has worked with over the years, in particular one of the most iconic and beautiful; the classic Chanel No.5.
